Neil Ghosh

Neil Ghosh is an author, speaker, and entrepreneur whose work spans business, nonprofit leadership, philanthropy, government, and international development.

Neil's journey has taken him from Kolkata to leading the Australian government's investment and trade office, and from overcoming significant personal and professional setbacks to leading organizations that serve vulnerable communities in more than 50 countries. For two decades, he dedicated his career to public service as CEO of SOS Children's Villages USA, executive vice president of the Global Fund for Children, and CEO of SNV Netherlands Development Organization USA. He currently serves as president of MGR Professional Services, advisor to the Ousri Foundation and the Healthy Climate Initiative, and an advisory board member of the Pro Human Foundation. He writes the Building Bridges column for Patheos.

Neil's award-winning book, Do More Good: Inspiring Lessons from Extraordinary People (with a foreword by His Holiness the Dalai Lama and an endorsement by President Bill Clinton), brings together remarkable stories from around the world to show that meaningful change begins with individual action.

Building on the book's message, Neil founded Our Ripple Effect, a growing movement that encourages people to strengthen their communities through everyday acts of kindness, service, listening, and leadership. Through speaking engagements across the United States and internationally, Neil helps audiences explore purpose, build trust across differences, and turn good intentions into practical action.
